Sounds sensible to me

EVERYONE HAS heard the news of the decision to extend next seasons Ericsson Cup to fourteen teams by now, and everyone will have their own opinion.

There was also widespread opinion about the changes introduced at the start of this season; including opinions being thrown about in courtrooms as the fat cat lawyers got richer and richer.

Now it seems that it is soccer's turn to gloat as we put our house in, comparative, order while the Rupert Murdoch backed 'Super Rugby League' seems to leap from one squabble to another.

It doesn't give many people in this game any satisfaction to see another sport endure a taste of what we had to put up with.

But it does put everything into a realistic perspective.

What we have to hope for now is that our courtroom troubles are behind us, that those who would seek to undermine the position of others who they consider to be a threat to their own security should back off a little.

This game is all about opinions, after all.

Everyone is entitled to one, although you could spend your entire day listening to people who want to tell you how to run the game, play your football, or even publish your magazine.

Opinions are great, they are what adds a touch of spice to our sport but at the same time we don't all want to rush into a courtroom every time someone's disagree with us.

But neither than do we want to be pushed around by the neighbourhood bully.

There has to be a lot of give and take in soccer because we have a lot of different factions.

Our game would be a lot stronger if we could accommodate all of those factions under the one happy umbrella.

Idealism?

Maybe.

OK, so now the In Blue & White (and that doesn't mean the official South Melbourne) opinion on the new format.

Firstly, thumbs up for bringing in Perth and thumbs up for announcing the format for the next again season and also for announcing that next season's fixture list will be available shortly.

But thumbs down for reducing the number of rounds.

If our season is going to form September until the end of April then that is approximately 32 weeks available for league soccer.

Toss in a couple of double-up holiday fixtures and it is easily conceivable that a 16 team league can fit into that time frame.

We already ARE playing 33 games - so why should we drop back?

Wouldn't it have been a lot easier to either say that the league will be increased to sixteen teams straight away or that the entry of ALL new clubs will be delayed for another season.

Sounds sensible to me - but then I won't take you to court if you disagree with me, either.....

Mini series lies ahead as Blues begin the countdown

IT'S REALLY down to the wire now, THE business end of the season. No more slip ups, no bad results, no games where the Blues get robbed – no more games like the Adelaide City one.

Instead, it has to be maximum points all the way home.

And if the Blues can keep on winning then that Top Six spot isn't totally unrealistic.

"We can do it," says coach Frank Arok.

"The players have to believe in themselves but we can't afford any mistakes.

"If South Melbourne keep on winning then we'll be in the Top Six again.

"I always said that March was going to be the important month and that is the way that it has turned out to be."

With two successive home wins against Morwell and Canberra behind, and more importantly the points on the ladder, that chasm between the Blues and the Top Six has now just shortened into daylight.

But if South Melbourne are to make the play-offs then some pretty decent opposition has to be overcome first.

VAUGHAN COVENTRY: hitting the goal trail again on the run home

Tonight Sydney United start a mini season of five games against Top Six contenders.

Sounds ominous – it IS.

But realistically, there is that word again, what is the point of just scraping into the finals and then getting bundled out.

So if Frank Arok's young marauders are going to do anything at all then sooner or later they are going to have to knock off the big guys.

And it might as well begin tonight.

Sydney United took maximum points from us last season but at the end of the day we got our own back – sending them packing in a finals match at Marconi Stadium.

They are a fine footballing side but when they play away from home they adopt a far more defensive style – as their record of away draws shows.

They will also be keen to avenge that last season game which ended in a bit of controversy as the ref's red card started flashing.

At stake is their own Top Six hope – but if the Blues are to keep alive Frank's dream then a streak of steel has to start creeping into the team.

Maybe tonight's the night.

But whatever, it looks like a really nail-biting finish to the season – and then at the end of that really hard five match struggle is another beauty.

HAPPY DAYS for the Blues – as United bundle out of last season's Top Six

That is when John Koamina brings his Breakers side down to a bit of revenge.

Bob Jane for a repeat Johnnie Walker Cup showdown.

Kossie wasn't happy with the January final and he'll be looking for a bit of revenge. Looks like there is a lot of really exciting football ahead – but it's been like that all season.

WHAT A FIND All white call-up

HE'S BEEN rated the find of the season by South Melbourne – and could be well in line for the Rookie of the Year title in this season's Ericsson Cup.

And while his brother Jason has grabbed his share of headlines, including a Socceroo appearance, Michael Petkovic (pictured above) is rated by many experts as the better keeper.

"He really has been a tremendous find for us," says South Melbourne General Manager, Peter Filopoulos.

"Michael came to us on recommendation and has really done very well."

In fact, Petkovic's form has been good enough to see off both Steve Mautone and Mike Lilikakis, both of whom have transferred to other clubs – and keep last season's number one, Dean Anastasiadis, on the bench.

Midfielder Vaughan Coveny's fine season has been rewarded by a call up to the New Zealand national squad which will shortly start preparing for a trip to China.

Coveny, who has gone to the top of the South Melbourne goal-scoring charts, is one of a large squad which the Kwis will trim down later to an eighteen man squad.

Last year he was also a member of the All White team which went down in a two legged series to Australia.
